— GREATER REDFORD

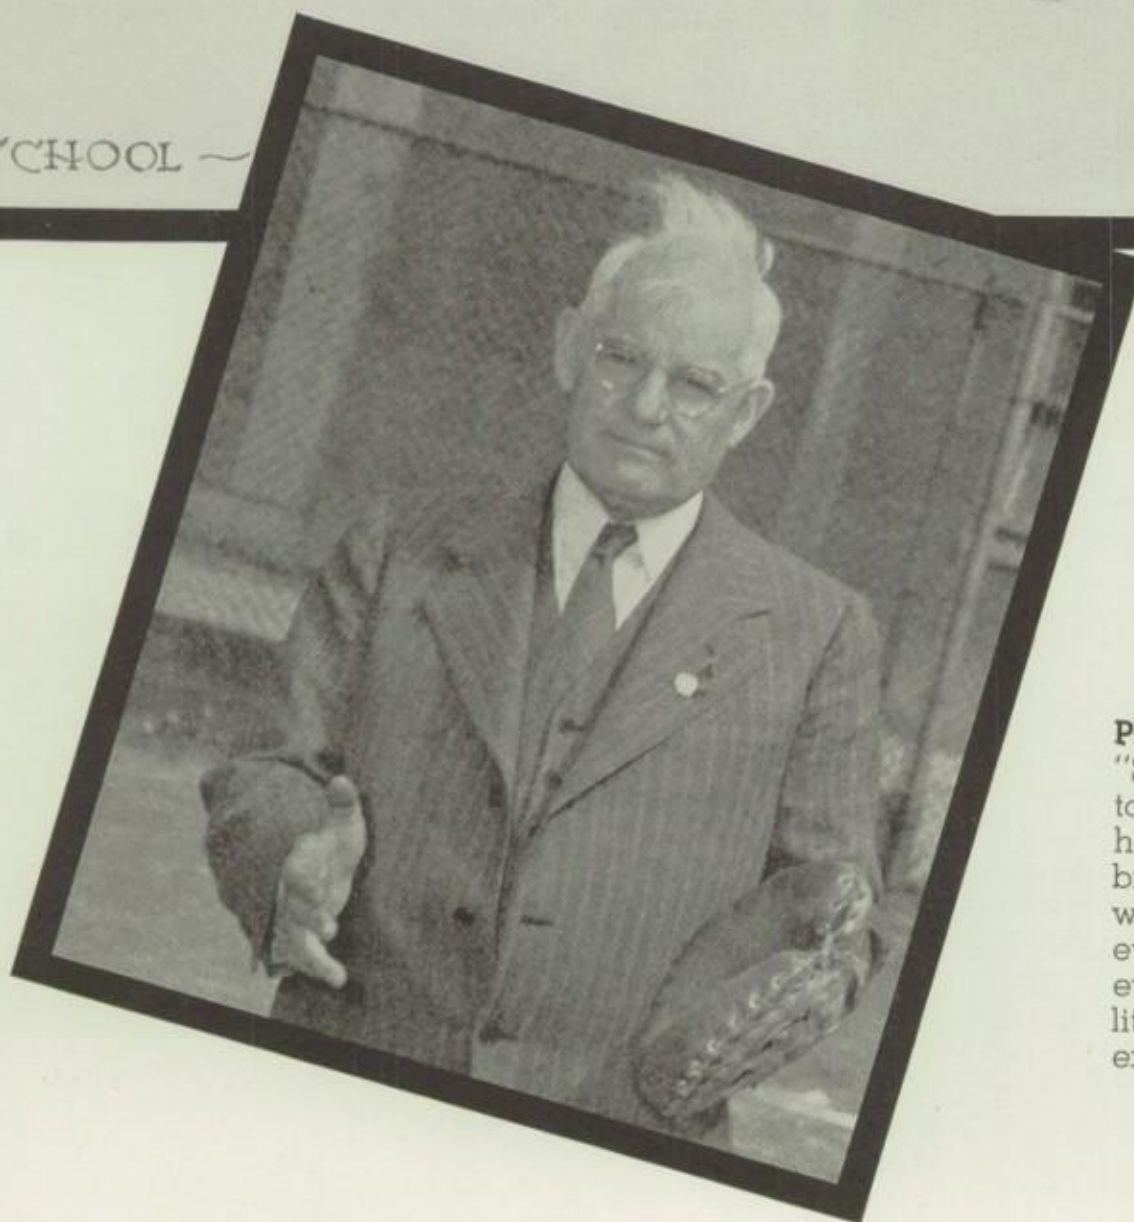

THE beautiful new Redford High School building stands as a monument to the enterprise, vision, and determination of the free people of this community. It embodies the hopes and aspirations of our youth. It is the physical symbol of all our country promises: trained minds and bodies, economic independence, fitness to serve the community, peace through reason and understanding, and most of all, happiness gained by intelligent and co-operative living.

Redford High School is young in years but rich in the growing heritage of high ideals and worthwhile accomplishments. In our city and state we are known and admired for our fine scholarship, our success in music and radio, and for our ability to do quickly and in the best way the many non-academic projects that are given us. The best example of this last characteristic is the fine work of our "I Will Do My Best" movement sponsored by the school defense council.

History is in the making these days. Our group of 3700 splendid boys and girls are bringing honor and fame to our great school and to themselves by their unselfish devotion to needs of the present hour.

GN SCHOOL ~

PRINCIPAL STOCKING, sometimes known as "Socks", stands behind all Redfordites and goes to bat for us everytime. Everyone with whom he comes in contact rates Mr. Stocking in the big leagues. His deep-seeing blue eyes, somewhat unruly hair, and sly humor are present at every senior meeting, all sports practices and events, and always there at goings-on, big or little. His hopes for the Redford to come are expressed in his message on the opposite page.

Shown below, taking their acting seriously, are Bob Rathbun as Mr. Harris, Peggy Davis as Milly Lou, Fred Tobias as G. A D U A T E S

FROM KINDERGARTEN TO CAP 'N' GOWN John Robert Carpenter, 12A president, (Bob for the sake of simplicity) says he owes success and popularity to the fact that "no one knows the real me." Don't kid yourself, John Robert; your life will be an open book to all who read this story of a great man's fight for recognition.

Every great mind has its complexities, but we think the only reason Bob would hide "the real me" is that he is bashful, since no one so handsome would conceal himself for any other reason.

From the time when little Bob entered grade school he has been the perfect example of a cheerful soul. As a safety patrol boy his beaming smile was a beacon to pedestrians crossing a busy street. His life in grade school was beautifully serene and happy. The only dark spot in all his sunshine was an uncompromising pedagogue: "The orneriest teacher I ever had," says Bob, "until I came to Redford."

John Robert has grown like a sunflower, as you can see by looking at the picture in the upper left and comparing it with Bob holding the ropes in the lower left. His three slouchy comrades are, from left to right: Paul Kiesal, Bob De Merritt, and Frank Marshall.

Bob is a man of letters, two in track and one in baseball. As long as he can remember, our hero's great ambition has been to become a U. S. senator. We are depending on Senator Carpenter to end all quibbling and promote future good will in Congress.

"I like understandable music," says Bob, "especially Fred Waring's. Nobody can beat me at Chinese checkers, except Coach Stuckey."

Tearful moments such as the one snapped in the lower right are very rare with the tall, blond president. But when such moments occur Bob always seeks comfort and advice from his most intimate friend, his dog. When downed by measles at the pinnacle of his career, his nomination as class president, Kim, a spotted Pomeranian, was his only source of consolation.

Bob is a member of the Hi-Y (Red), Student Council, "R" Club, and is an acknowledged member of Aeolian. The great man paid tribute to his old surroundings with the following words: "Redford was the scene" (mind you not the cause) "of the happiest years of my life."

"The Chatterer", Commercial Department newspaper, is here being run off the mimeograph machine by the enterprising editors, Rosemary Ziehr, Nella Baker, June Layland, and Ruth Tober. The first two issues grossed for the Commercial Club five dollars for defense.

Some girls in one of the Office Practice classes are shown getting experience in typing, mimeographing, filing, and taking dictation. This year marks the first Office Practice course at Redford.

Foreign language and social science classes of Redford are working to promote Pan-American good will. One of their projects was the recent Pan-American essay contest, entered by fifteen students, and won by Hazel Wallace. The contestants gathered their material from the Latin-American book-shelf in the school library. In the picture, Chloe McLain is organizing the display of some of the library's new South American books.

Always busy working in clay and having a lot of fun are members of the pottery class, which is new just this semester. Over fifty pieces, including piggy banks, all sorts of dishes, figures, animals, and even a tea set made by Marjory Clark, 11A, have been sent to Cooley kiln to be fired. Redford hopes to have its own kiln soon and then students can make their own glazes. In the picture, Michael Freeman, Julia McEwan, J. C. Whitefoot, and Marie McDonald are molding clay.

Claudia Phillips, only Redford winner in the district speech contest held here, April 20, placed second in the oration division of the University of Michigan's annual forensic competition. Other Redfordites who participated were Charles Remsburg, Doris Jones, and Shirley Snediker. Altogether there are 335 students in Redford's public speaking, radio, and dramatics courses.

Cutting, steaming, and sewing, the girls in the millinery class are busily making their new spring bonnets. Through their studies of home science these students have learned the art of making and buying smart and durable clothes. Foods classes, too, teach conservation and economy, as well as the preparation of tasty food and attractive service.

The "Spotlite", Redford's annual variety show staged by the clubs of the school, celebrated its fifteenth anniversary, March 27 and 28. Mr. R. G. Van Avery, veteran director, was this year assisted by a faculty committee. A five-foot birthday cake from which stepped a dancer was the surprise number presented by the Ellen H. Richards Club. Other highlights of the program were a "Henry Aldrich" play by the Radio Club and the Nescor Club's demonstration with liquid air. Upper left photo, below, shows four of "The Ten Little Redford Boys" caught in the act—the Hi-Y act. Left to right are Bill Jones, Norman Phillips, Michael Quinn, and Bob DeMerritt. Upper right shows a "Scene from the Life of Stephen Foster", presented by the Senior Glee Club. Jack Ringstad is seated at the piano, surrounded by Paul McAdams, Herb Tucker, and Jim Westfall. At the lower left, "Constable" Martha Vargha rescues Little Nell in Vigilanti's meller drammer, "Little Nell". In the back-ground stands Marjorie Clark. That's Bob Carpenter, leaning on that broom for part of the Hi-Y act.

"A busy season" pretty well sums up the activities of the music department for this semester. Broadcasts over WJR and WWJ were a part of the orchestra's work, along with playing for the Faculty Play, Senior Play, and Spotlight. In the spring concert a repeat performance of the modern composition, "Metropolis", again demonstrated the orchestra's skill.

The now famous R.O.T.C. Band led the R.O.T.C. section of the Army Day parade and also did a Board of Education broadcast. Their stirring rendition of the "Stars and Stripes Forever" was another feature of the concert.

In the vocal division, Martha Grady and Jack Ringstad, two of Redford's favorites, combined forces to render two memorable Victor Herbert numbers at the Spring Concert. The Senior Girls' Glee Club was busy singing for several functions at the Masonic Temple and also assisted the Schoolmen's Chorus in their Concert here at Redford.

A group of selected girls supplied music for the Poetry Club and also sang at the Fischer Branch of the YWCA.

The boys' quartet sang for the members of the Exchange Club at Huck's Inn.

All of the 1031 students in the music department took part in a finale to the Annual Spring Concert, "Ode to America".

The Dance Band with members from the Senior Orchestra and Band added pep to the club dances throughout the year.

placing second to Central on the West Side and then performed the upset of the year by downing Highland Park in the semi-finals, 3 to 2, and beating Central in the finals, 4 to 1. The Trailblazers had defeated the Huskies during the regular season, but Chapin came through to avenge his previous loss to Al Gross by beating the latter, 6-4, 12-10; and Bill Drudge and Jim Nankervis, the boys who saved the Highland Park match by winning their third set, 7-5, won over the Central doubles team which beat them in the earlier meet. Bill Sayres won 6-3, 6-4 in the finals to remain undefeated in eleven matches, and Bob Richards repeated his earlier victory over Bob Blumenfeld by winning 6-2, 6-1. Because of his success during the league season and in the playoffs, Chapin was one of the favorites to win the individual singles title in the City Tournament which started on June 1. The results of this were not ready in time for the yearbook, however.

Coach Hermanson's golfers displayed their usual winning form, but heartbreaking losses to U. of D. and Mackenzie prevented them from reaching the playoffs in the dual competition. They were more successful in the match play, however, placing second to the Cubs at North Hills on May 25.

The baseball team started the season with several new players; but they made three wins in five practice games. Commerce and Pershing and All Stars were the Huskies' victims in the pre-season contests, while league competition saw victories over Northwestern, U. of D., and Western during the first six games.

Frank Marshall, who will captain next year's team, was one of the best basketball forwards in the city this year, but the team failed to come through on top in six of their league games, winning only three. The otherwise dismal season was brightened by Marshall's success in making the first teams on the all-city squads of the Times and Free Press and the News' second team. Other highlights included the win over Cooley on Friday, February 13, and the opening contest, in which the Huskies lost by only two points to Southwestern's team, which later took the West League championship.

Carl Chambers, pole-vaulter; Vic Krohn, hurdler; and Captain Glenn Tipton, quarter miler, were caught in action by the Outpost camera as they practiced for the Wayne Relays.

The indoor track team won two of their league meets by forfeit, defeated Southwestern, and lost to Western. Non-league competition resulted in losses to Cooley and Northwestern. In the City meet, Carl Chambers, 11A, took second in the pole vault to give the Huskies eight points and eleventh place.

Outdoor competition found the boys somewhat improved, and they took ninth in the Wayne Relays. In these contests, Chambers in the pole vault; Vic Krohn, Keith Heiss, Gordon Stanley, and Glenn Tipton in the mile relay won firsts. A second place went to the distance relay team composed of Al Wease, George Olsen, Ed Brugman, and Fred Juergens.

Ruel Kahler and Bob Rathbun upheld the tradition of our ROTC unit by becoming field officers. Kahler became a cadet lieutenant colonel, and Rathbun was promoted to the rank of cadet major. This was the second consecutive semester in which Redford has had two ranking officers.

The drill platoon placed second to Chadsey in the city-wide competition with eleven other high schools, and J. Lacy was chosen as finalist for Field Day in the manual of arms contest on April 29. The unit as a whole participated in the Federal inspection on May 19, and competed in ROTC Field Day on June 2.

The girls' swimming team wound up their season with a record of two victories and three defeats. Wins were over Cooley and Chadsey while the girls lost to Highland Park, Mackenzie, and Northwestern.

In basketball, Redford's fairer sex was successful against Chadsey and Pershing, but lost to Cooley, Highland Park, and Mackenzie.

Under the supervision of Miss Beaumont, the Girls' Athletic Association has been formed to promote greater interest in girls' sports and deal with related problems, such as the question of what kind of award should be given to participants in girls' sports.

The honors assembly held at the end of each term rewards outstanding students in curricular and extra-curricular activities. So numerous are the awards now that two days must be used for the purpose of distributing them. June 17 and 18 were the important days this year.

To those brainy pupils who achieve the feat of getting all A's in all academic subjects on all card markings go Hi-Y honor certificates.

School letters are awarded to the members of the various athletic teams.

The senior girl selected by a faculty committee as most outstanding is presented with a medal and has her name engraved on the school Girl Reserve trophy.

The Student Council awards a cup to the athletic team with the highest average of scholarship among its members.

The Biology Award goes to the most outstanding pupil of biology.

Membership in Quill and Scroll, International Society for High School Journalists, along with a Quill and Scroll pin, is given to outstanding members of the Outpost staff who have fulfilled the requirements of the Society in writing.

The winners of the "Il Penseroso" and "L' Allegro" divisions in the Annual Poetry Contest receive prizes from the Poetry Club.

The pupil of the commercial department who has done the most outstanding work receives the Commercial Award.

The Aeolian Music Award goes to the students who have contributed the most to the music department during the last term.

Outstanding work in radio production and technique is recognized in the presentation of the Radio Award.

The Eta Sigma Phi Latin award is given to Latin students who maintain a record of all A's in final marks throughout eight semesters of Latin.

Special service in any extra-curricular activity is rewarded with a merit certificate.

TO WIN THE WAR

Just as war has necessitated a change in the industrial organization of America, so has it effected a change in the nation's high schools. Factories represent our industrial effort, armies and navies our military effort, and high schools represent our youth effort. Since December 7, Defense has become the center of all kinds of school activities.

On November 11, the first meeting of the Student Defense Council was called. Composed of Student Council members, the defense council met once every month to plan the school's victory program. The council was later expanded to include representatives from all the record hour classes. Emergency preparations came next. Air raid drills brought new rules and regulations. First Aid courses became a required subject on every senior's schedule.

An advisory committee of alumni, parents, and teachers was organized in December and met with the officers of the Student Defense Council to help in supervising the school's war effort. However, the Junior Red Cross Council, composed of club representatives, is also responsible for stimulating defense activities among the clubs.

Conservation has been the chief aim of Redford's defense program. The Red Cross received the profits from a newspaper drive in which 3,400 pounds of waste paper were collected. Additional paper drives were made by the Hi-Y. An equally successful scrap iron drive brought in 10,000 pounds of scrap metal. Different clubs around school have collected other articles. Especially noteworthy, the Latin Club collected 605 license plates.

The sale of defense bonds and stamps is carried on in clubs and record hour classes. So far the sale of stamps and bonds has netted $8,515. Each chapter of the Hi-Y is the proud owner of two twenty-five dollar defense bonds.

Every department offers some special line of training in war work. Boys in the vocational department are helping to turn out Redford's quota of 400 model airplanes of the 75,000 to be used for practice targets.

Clubs which make outstanding defense contributions receive special recognition on the victory honor roll posted in the old building. The Spanish Club achieved the honor for February, the French Club for March, and the Hi-Y for April. The Red Cross Council has compiled a scrapbook showing the different club activities which will be sent to branches of the Red Cross in foreign countries.

On April 28, the newly expanded War Council met in the high school auditorium to set in motion the biggest war project the school had undertaken, the "I Will Do My Best" campaign. Students were urged to raise victory gardens, reduce failures, tardiness and absence, and buy stamps. Each delegate returned to his class and took charge of a special project. An eight-page war edition of the "Outpost" was the campaign's biggest undertaking. The "Win the War" issue reached a circulation of 5,000 copies. On May 29, a patriotic rally was held out-of-doors on the athletic field to permit the entire student body of 3,700 to attend. At this assembly Mildred Moss, Defense Council president, presented the school with a flag honoring Redford alumni in service with the armed forces.

No project can be successful unless it is given publicity. The chief means in Redford for advertising are the radio, the Outpost, and posters drawn by art classes and the Adcraft Club.

Radio classes, the Outpost, and art classes have joined in getting across to all the students news and plans of the Defense Council and clubs of the school in war activities. Speech classes, too, helped personalize campaigns in classes not reached by the public address system.

Pictured at the left are members of the radio class practicing for their "live" broadcast over WJLB on April 27. The broadcast was a revision of the now famous recording of Redford's scrap drive, and serving the same purpose—that of publicizing the school's war activities. The original record, incidentally, has gained the reputation of a veteran traveler, having been played all over Michigan, in Ohio, and in West Virginia.

The radio classes have willingly advertised practically every drive that clubs or other organizations have carried on and have undoubtedly played an important part in the success of them, including the "Win the War" Outpost. A contest for the writing of defense radio scripts was one of their more direct contributions.

During this term, the radio classes underwent a complete reorganization and became a real broadcasting station with the letters WRBG, which stands for Redford Broadcasting Guild.

Members of the Outpost staff are shown at the left working on their special "Win the War" issue. Approximately 5,000 copies of that edition were sold, about 2,000 of them being extra. Actually, a total of about 3,500 people worked on the paper. These included several thousands of English and social science students who wrote essays, excerpts from which were printed in the paper. The purpose of the special edition was to inform not only Redford students, but also the people of the community as to what Redford is doing to help hasten victory. Outside publicity was provided for by the art classes' eighty posters, some of which were placed in the school and some in display windows of the community. A good deal of credit, too, should go to Mr. Edwards and his circulation staff, and to Mr. Greene and his advertising staff.

The Adcraft Club and art students are also playing a major part in publicity. The posters have advertised every major defense drive in school. The Service Roll, crossword puzzles sent to the U.S.O., and posters are their contributions to defense.

At the right, Anne Alberts, Outpost member, and Mr. Walton are shown interviewing Corporal Thomas Miller, graduate of 1937. Tom, who visited his alma mater in April, is telling them of his thrilling experiences in the Japanese raid on Pearl Harbor.

Lower right: Marilyn Byington has a busy time keeping the Service Roll up to date.

Students have been giving up that extra candy bar lately so that some service man might enjoy the sweet stuff. A glass-front box in the lunchroom, provided by the Hi-Y Club, is a willing recipient of about sixty bars a month.

What soldier wouldn't enjoy receiving a sweater or a pair of socks from these four misses of the Red Cross Knitting Club? This club was the first organized to carry out defense work. In a clinic held by the club, girls are taught the ins and outs of the craft. Huge bundles of knitted apparel leave Redford monthly for the men in the service.

The Footlights Club has been doing their bit for defense by entertaining at the Marine Hospital at Grosse Pointe. Defense skits, music, and comedy were the features of the programs. The club also gives defense skits at outside organizations and schools. Candy bars have been sent to air cadets at Grosse Ile by the club.

The quilt shown on the opposite page was the defense project of the A. S. M. D. Club. The girls turned the quilt pieced by them over to the Red Cross, who saw that it went to a deserving family. The club also sponsored a drive for games for service men; they are now knitting.

Cookies for soldiers, sailors, and marines is the French Club's project for victory. The cookies are delivered each Tuesday by club members to U. S. O. headquarters where they fill the U. S. O. cookie jars.

A Service Roll hand lettered by Marilyn Byington lists the Redford alumni who are now in the branches of service, either sailing the seven seas or doing a work out in the infantry or mechanized forces.

Melvin and Marvin Simms, Hildred Bessey, and Mr. Sayres are shown mailing 750 letters that Mr. Sayres' classes wrote service men.

Jubilant over the success of their paper drive are Hi-Y's Ron Thiele, Ralph Mascow, Jack Wilson, Bob De Meritt and Bill Graham. This drive netted 3,965 pounds of scrap paper.

In order to make their shop math more practical, Bill Clark and Frank Williams constructed wooden models, which they used to demonstrate problems in gear ratios.

The Nescor Club gave a public demonstration May 1, of the composition of an incendiary bomb, the burning of magnesium (see picture), and preparation of chlorine. Chemists are Cecil Sharp, Carl Chambers; spectator is Evelyn Johnson.

Mr. Franson added to the list of Redford faculty defense activities when he took a shop course to prepare for a defense job this summer. Among the faculty are air-raid wardens, first-aid instructors, Victory gardeners, etc.
